To help stimulate home sales, both the federal and state governments are offering tax credits for Californians purchasing their piece of the American dream. Federal law offers up to $8,000 for first-time homebuyers and $6,500 for long-time residents. California law offers up to $10,000 for first-time homebuyers or buyers of properties that have never been occupied. Here's a handy summary of the two tax credit laws:

HOMEBUYER TAX CREDIT	FEDERAL	CALIFORNIA
Amount of Tax Credit	10% of purchase price not to exceed $8,000 for First-Time Homebuyers or $6,500 for Long-Term Residents.	5% of purchase price, not to exceed $10,000 for first-time homebuyers or buyers of properties that have never been occupied. (See also Maximum Credit for All Taxpayers.)
Date of Purchase	By June 30, 2010, but taxpayer must enter into a written binding contract by April 30, 2010.	From May 1, 2010 to July 31, 2011, but an enforceable contract must be executed by December 31, 2010.
